Serious illness – the bigger risk?

You probably consider dying to be one of the biggest risks you'll face. And to protect your family you might have life insurance in place. If you do, it's a great first step. If you die within the term of your cover, you are covered. If you don't die, you are not covered. It's as simple as that.

Unfortunately, life isn't that simple.

While death comes to us all, it's serious illness that perhaps is our biggest risk. In fact, you are much more likely to suffer from Cancer, a Heart Attack, or a Stroke before age 65 than you are to die.*

And what if you do become seriously ill and you can't work? What if you find yourself struggling financially at a time when money should be the last thing on your mind?

That's why you should have serious illness cover.

Serious illness – a bigger risk than death?

Before age 60 the risk of suffering a serious illness is much greater than the risk of dying. And as you get older, that risk increases dramatically.

Occurrences of male deaths and serious illnesses in a sample of the population

Source: Brett & du Toit (2007) A Critical Table - Pricing Critical Illness in the UK on a New Insured Lives Table. The figures shown are the number of male (non-smoker) deaths & serious illnesses that occur per 10,000 people in the UK.

You are 4 times more likely to suffer a serious illness when you are age 50 than you are to die.

If you do suffer a serious illness – what could you rely on?

 Sick-pay	Firstly, you should check with your employer to see what sick-pay arrangements they have in place. You could be surprised at how generous (or how poor!) some sick-pay arrangements are.
 Existing cover	You should also review what cover you already have in place – are you familiar with the terms of your existing policies? Check with a financial broker or advisor if you are unsure.
 Savings	Consider the savings you have. Ask yourself how much you need to spend every month and work out how long your savings could last. Unfortunately for many Irish people, their savings may not last as long as they hoped.

Why consider serious illness cover?

It pays out a cash lump sum if you get one of the many serious illnesses covered by the plan – illnesses such as Cancer, a Heart Attack, or a Stroke (subject to policy terms and conditions).

A cash lump sum can help remove some of the financial and emotional stress associated with a serious illness – to enable you to take the time off work, to help pay for specialist treatment or even to help cover day-to-day household bills such as childcare.

If you think that serious illness could put you or your finances at risk, then you should speak to a financial broker or advisor.

Even a little cover can stretch a long way

Even a small amount of serious illness cover can go a long way. If you needed €2,500 every month (€30,000 in a year) to cover your household expenses, the good news is that it doesn't have to cost the earth. The table below shows how far even a small amount of cover could go and the monthly cost.

Funding for your current lifestyle

Source: Zurich Life, February 2020. Based on age 40 next, non-smoker with serious illness cover for a term of 20 years. A government insurance levy (1% as at February 2020 and may change in the future) applies to this policy. These sample premiums do not include this levy.

Funding your household expenses for 2 years could cost as little as €34.59 per month*.

*Based on providing cover for monthly expenses of €2,500 over 2 years.

But it's important that you don't delay

All forms of life insurance cost more the older you get, and serious illness cover is no different. The longer you leave it, the more it will cost you.

The younger you are, the less it costs

Source: Zurich Life, February 2020. Based on non-smoker with €50,000 serious illness cover for a term of 20 years. A government insurance levy (1% as at February 2020 and may change in the future) applies to this policy. These sample monthly premiums do not include this levy.

In 2019, over 45% of Zurich's female serious illness claims were for women under age 50.
