

Equity losing streak continues as bears remain in control

US stocks led the global index lower, with the S&P 500 hitting an intraday bear market Friday afternoon before rallying into the close. Markets suffered their biggest declines since the summer of 2020 on Wednesday as markets fell over 4%. Investors were concerned by several revenue and profit warnings from several large US retailers, most notably Target which saw its stock price fall by over 30% following its earnings release.

The macro perspective did little to cheer market participants with Fed Chair Powell telling the Wall Street Journal mid-week that taming inflation was an 'unconditional need', and this could mean 'some pain'. In the UK, diminishing optimism in respect to the economy remains a talking point as inflation hit 9.0% in April – the highest level since 1982. On a related point weekly earnings growth came in at 7% over the same period with the unemployment rate falling to 3.7%. Both releases point to the continued tightness in the labour market.

The prospect of higher interest rates in the eurozone continues to gather momentum with several ECB Council members discussing the prospect of a 50bps (0.5%) hike over the summer. However, core bond yields finished the week broadly as how they started as the above comments were tempered by the disappointing earnings releases from the US. The European Commission published its latest GDP forecasts and cut the expectations from 4.0% to 2.7% with inflation expectations shifting from 3.5% to 6.1%. There was some optimism in China with equities rising as the central bank cut interest rates to help support the property sector.
