

Monthly Investment Review

The latter half of 2015 marked an inflection point in markets as the Federal Reserve hiked interest rates for the first time in almost a decade; investors are now focusing on the likely pace and scale of the US rate rise cycle. Economic weakness in China and the emerging markets as well as sharply lower oil prices have caused a significant pick-up in volatility levels although this should provide opportunities for investors. Equities remain fairly valued on a historical basis and are better value on a relative basis than either cash or bonds. However, concerns over global economic growth have resulted in a scaling back of earnings growth expectations in 2016 to only 5%. Eurozone bonds do not appear to offer much upside potential from here.

Equity Markets

- Equities (in euro terms) fell heavily in January, with the first two weeks being the worst start to a calendar year in living memory. Markets had a partial recovery towards the end of the month on the back of a dovish speech from ECB President Draghi, hinting at further monetary easing in March, and a surprise move by the Bank of Japan in introducing negative interest rates for certain current account deposits. Monetary policies between different central banks are clearly becoming more divergent. On a technical basis, the key S&P 500 Index finished January 8.9% off its all-time high set on 21st May 2015.
- World equities (in euro terms) fell by 5.5% during the January but were off over 9% after the first two week. All of the major markets were down in local currency terms during January ranging from minus 2.5% in the UK to minus 10.2% in Hong Kong, the latter affected by events in mainland China. The influential US market was down by 5.1%.
- Sectorwise in the US, economically sensitive areas, such as materials (-11%) and industrials (-6%), generally underperformed defensive bond-proxy areas, such as telecoms (+5%) and utilities (+5%), over the period under review.

Bonds & Interest Rates

- The Merrill Lynch Euro over 5 Year Index rose by 2.0% in January. Bonds have been supported by economic growth concerns, low inflation and recent turmoil in equity markets.

Core eurozone bond markets, such as Germany (+2.5%), have slightly outperformed peripheral markets such as Italy (+1.2%) so far this year.

- The German 10-year bond yield fell in January from 0.63% to 0.32%. The yield had hit an all-time low of 0.05% in mid-April 2015. Equivalent US rates fell from 2.27% to 1.92%.
- The markets currently believe that there is little likelihood of another US rate rise until 2017. Further rate cuts are expected in the eurozone, possibly in March and June 2016.

Commodities & Currencies

- Commodity prices overall have fallen heavily over the last 18 months. The trend continued in January (-5.3%), with oil prices down by around 8% to $34 per barrel. Saudi Arabia has continued its policy of oversupply whilst demand for oil from China has come off.
- The gold price was up by 5% on the month to $1,116 per troy ounce, bouncing off a five-year low.
- The euro currency was little changed against the US dollar and the Japanese yen during January, although it strengthened against the British pound and the Swiss franc. The EUR/USD rate moved from 1.09 to 1.08 over the month.

The Financial Express sector averages shown are the average of all funds in each of the Financial Express sectors in the individual pensions category.

Annual management charges (AMC) apply. The fund returns shown are net of the AMC deducted by Zurich Life in our unit prices. The fund returns are based on an investment in the funds and do not represent the returns achieved by individual policies linked to the funds. These fund returns may be before the full AMC is applied to a policy. The actual returns on policies linked to the specified fund will be lower because of the effects of charges and in some cases a higher management charge.

* External fund size: Where external funds have been on the Zurich platform for less than two years, we have used the fund size of the underlying external fund.

Figures highlighted in blue indicate where the Zurich Life fund has outperformed the sector average.
