

Monthly Investment Review

- After suffering a torrid December, stock markets in the US and most other regions rebounded strongly in January as investors' pessimism receded and some near-term risks dissipated, at least for now.
- The Federal Reserve struck a more dovish note, taking into account recent market volatility, while market sentiment improved on indications that the US and China are making progress with regard to their trade talks.
- While these developments are a necessary condition for markets to climb higher going forward, the economic outlook and expected earnings growth are crucial for further upside potential. It is interesting to note that the US stock market is up almost 15% from its low point on Christmas Eve.

Activity

Equity positions are towards the upper end of ranges in all of the multi-asset portfolios. Zurich remains reasonably constructive on equities in general although some profits may be taken in coming months if markets continue to rally.

With regards to geographic positions, the main bias is towards Asia-Pacific while underweight positions are held in Europe and the UK. The US was moved from slightly underweight to neutral at the beginning of January. Sector positions were broadly maintained during the month.

The funds are positively biased towards financial, technology and materials stocks and negatively biased towards utilities and real estate. Bond positions are towards the bottom of ranges whilst the duration of the remaining bonds is low.

Equity & Bond % Returns: January 2019

This graph shows the performance of the major equity markets over the month of January. The returns are shown in both local and euro currencies. The bond index is the Merrill Lynch Over Five Year Euro Government Bond Index.

MARKET PERFORMANCE

Equities

World equities (in euro terms) rose by a strong 7.4% in January, almost reversing December's hefty 8.0% decline. Local currency returns in January for the major markets ranged from plus 8.1% in Hong Kong to plus 3.6% in the UK. The influential US market was up by 7.9%. Earnings results for Q4 2018 although not particularly strong were nevertheless taken well by the markets. Regarding sectors in the US during January, economically sensitive cyclical stocks outperformed defensive areas in the more risk-on environment.

Fixed Income & Currencies

The Over Five Year Euro Government Bond Index rose by 1.6% in January with most markets giving similar returns. Eurozone bond prices reacted positively to benign inflation and weaker economic data, with Germany posting its slowest annual growth rate since 2013. The German ten-year bond yield fell during January, moving from 0.24% to 0.15%. Equivalent US rates moved from 2.68% to 2.63%. With the exception of a stronger pound sterling, most currencies were little changed against the euro during the month.

Alternatives

Commodity prices rose by close to 6% in January, led by a sharp rise in energy prices - a reversal of conditions in December. After nine months of severe declines, the oil price jumped by over 15% in January on the hopes that economic growth concerns in the US and China may have been somewhat exaggerated. The gold price rose by 3% during the month finishing at $1,320 per troy ounce while copper rose by 5%.

Annual management charges (AMC) apply. The fund returns shown are net of the AMC deducted by each provider in their unit prices. This will vary for each provider, and any difference will impact the relative performance of the funds shown. The fund returns are based on an investment in the funds and do not represent the returns achieved by individual policies linked to the funds. These fund returns may be before the full AMC is applied to a policy. The actual returns on policies linked to the specified fund will be lower because of the effects of charges and in some cases a higher management charge.
