Week in Review

- As expected, the US Federal Reserve raised short term interest rates last week by 25 basis points, to give a new target range of 0.75%-1.0%. The vote of confidence in the US economy was matched by further encouraging economic data, with the Conference Board's index of leading economic indicators now sitting at its best level in over ten years.
- European stocks performed well during the week, as the Fed's move higher was complemented by Dutch voters' rejection of Far-Right candidate Geert Wilders, in favour of current leader Mark Rutte.
- US treasury prices rose during the week as comments from Chair Janet Yellen in the wake of the Fed announcement were seen as more hawkish. Oil posted a slight gain on the back of falling US stockpiles and comments from Saudi Arabia; committing to curtailing its production.
