Week in Review

- Risk assets closed out the first half of the year on a negative note, as a more hawkish tone, in relation to interest rates, from both the ECB President Mario Draghi and BoE Chief Economist Andrew Haldane sent stocks lower, the Euro higher, and government bond prices lower. Equities still finished the first half of the year in positive territory, whilst eurozone sovereign bonds have lost value over the first six months of 2017.
- President Draghi's positive assessment on the eurozone economy led to speculation that the ECB may begin to phase out its asset purchase programme pushed the euro to its highest level in more than a year. The talk of 'tapering' and the fears of less central bank stimulus weighed on European stocks.
- In the US, the delay of a proposed Healthcare vote was a blow to the Trump Administration. This was tempered by some stronger economic data, with favourable trade balance data released. Japanese trade data was also positive, whilst oil returned its biggest weekly gain since mid-May following a drop in US production.

The Week Ahead

Tuesday 4 July	Thursday 6 July	Friday 7 July
UK services PMI data goes to print and is expected to fall to 53.4 from 53.8, perhaps signaling a more cautious stance as Brexit negotiations begin in earnest.	The ECB releases the minutes for its June meeting, which may deliver further insight into their potential exit strategy from their current accommodative monetary policy.	The June jobs report for the US is released where the consensus expects a rise of 177,000, from 138,000 a month ago. The unemployment rate is forecast to remain steady at 4.3%.
